The district change in Colorado was designed to even out population size between districts. Before the redistricting, District 1 had a total population of 24,000 people and after the total population increased to 74,000. The goal set by Colorado legislature aims to have no district population over 150,000 people. Adjusting the boundary for District 1 to take on a set of census tracts including 50,000 people helps surrounding districts achieve this goal without greatly disrupting the demographics of the District.
